

Kennedy Wilson — Developer Pursuit Dossier

Prepared for: Jim DesRoches, KOR Structural | Trip: San Diego, June 29–July 1, 2026 | Date: 26 Jun 2026

1. Snapshot

Field	Detail
Type	Multifamily developer / investor / asset manager
HQ	Beverly Hills, CA — with Bellevue WA office covering PNW
Leadership	William McMorrow (Chairman & CEO); Matt Windisch (President)
Scale / AUM	~$28B pre-Toll Brothers; ~$33–36B post-acquisition (Toll Brothers platform closed ~Q4 2025, added $5B+ AUM)
KOR markets active	San Diego (The Lindley — completed 2025, KOR is SE); LA/SoCal pipeline (~1,500 units via Toll Brothers); Seattle (Danforth + Pratt Park acquisitions)
Priority	High — KOR's Toll Brothers relationship (The Lindley) followed the org into KW via the Sept-2025 Apartment Living acquisition. (The Lindley was a Toll Brothers/PGIM development, not a KW one — frame it as a relationship that carried over, not a KW incumbency.)
Relationship status	Prior engagement confirmed: KOR Structural is the structural engineer of record on The Lindley , a Toll Brothers/PGIM JV now under Kennedy Wilson management. John McCullough (former Toll Brothers Apartment Living President, now President of KW Multifamily Development) oversaw that project.

2. Business & Footprint

Who they are. Kennedy Wilson was founded in 1977 as a real estate brokerage and grew into a vertically integrated developer, investor, and asset manager. Core business today is multifamily development and rental housing in the Mountain West, Pacific Northwest, Northern California, and Southern California.

The Fairfax take-private (June 15–16, 2026). Kennedy Wilson completed a $1.65B all-cash privatization led by CEO William McMorrow and Fairfax Financial Holdings ($10.90/share), delisting from NYSE effective June 16, 2026. Fairfax holds a majority economic interest; the McMorrow management consortium retains full operational control. Fairfax and KW have a 15+ year partnership ($8B+ in collaborative acquisitions). Strategic rationale: shed public-company compliance costs, focus management on long-term strategy. Financed by a $1.8B senior notes issuance (May 2026). Implication for KOR: no quarterly earnings pressure means leadership can pursue larger development bets — and transition to private creates a natural reset point for vendor relationships.

The Toll Brothers Apartment Living acquisition (Sept 2025, ~$380M). This is the most important structural fact for KOR's pursuit. Kennedy Wilson paid ~$380M to absorb Toll Brothers' entire multifamily development arm, including:

- GP interests in 18 stabilized apartment/student housing assets (~$2.2B AUM)
- A 29-site development pipeline in various stages, projected at ~$3.6B of invested capital on completion
- Management of 20 additional Toll Brothers-retained properties (~$3B AUM)
- The entire Toll Brothers Apartment Living executive team, led by John McCullough (20-year Toll vet) who is now President of Kennedy Wilson Multifamily Development

Why this matters: The Lindley, KOR's prior project, was developed by Toll Brothers Apartment Living. McCullough ran that group when KOR was engaged. He now runs development at Kennedy Wilson. KOR's prior relationship follows the org.

3. Active Pipeline in KOR's Markets

Project	Location	Scale	Stage	Architect / GC
---------	----------	-------	-------	----------------

Project	Location	Scale	Stage	Architect / GC
The Lindley	Downtown San Diego (1331 Columbia St)	37-story, 362 residential units + 60-key hotel, 800,000 SF	Complete — opened March 2025	JWDA Architects / Swinerton Builders
Warner Center	6464 Canoga Ave, Los Angeles	8-story, 276 units, 8,600 SF retail	Approved Dec 2025 (in pre-development / KW pipeline)	AC Martin / GC TBD
Culver City / Long Beach	LA Metro	~1,200+ units across multiple sites	Planning / entitlement (Toll Brothers pipeline, now KW)	TBD
Anacapa Canyon	Camarillo, CA	589 units (master-planned; 310 market rate + 170 senior + 109 for-sale)	Delivering — first move-ins 2024	TBD
The Danforth	First Hill, Seattle WA	16-story, 265 units	Stabilized — acquired June 2025 ($173M with Japanese JV partners)	Existing asset
Pratt Park	Central District, Seattle WA	6-story, 248 units	Stabilized — acquired ~2025 ($80.4M)	Existing asset

Note on The Lindley unit count: Kennedy Wilson’s own case study lists 362 residential apartments; Toll Brothers’ groundbreaking and grand opening press releases list 422 total “residences,” which likely includes the 60-key integrated boutique hotel. KOR was engaged on the full 800,000 SF development.

Note on the 29-site pipeline: Geographic breakdown is not publicly disclosed at the project level. Confirmed markets include Atlanta, Boston, Dallas, LA, New York, Philadelphia, Phoenix, and Washington DC. The LA pipeline (Warner Center, Culver City, Long Beach) sits squarely in KOR’s market.

4. Who Decides Structural / Who to Know

Name	Title	Email	Role in SE Decisions
Michael Eadie	Head of U.S. Development & Construction	meadie@kennedywilson.com	PRIMARY. Owns all US construction decisions; oversees 80+ properties with $2.5B+ active budgets. 25 years experience, career-long KW employee (PM → VP → Managing Director).
John McCullough	President, Multifamily Development	jmccullough@kennedywilson.com	SECONDARY / warm intro. Ran Toll Brothers Apartment Living when KOR did The Lindley — he knows the firm. Now owns the 29-site pipeline. 20-year Toll veteran.
William McMorrow	Chairman & CEO	wmcmorrow@kennedywilson.com	Relationship target for firm-level positioning; not a day-to-day SE decision-maker.
Dan Hartman	Managing Director	dhartman@kennedywilson.com	Heads Debt Investment / construction lending (NY-based). Relevant if KOR needs a financing intro, not for SE procurement.
Declan Hegarty	Director, Development	dhegarty@kennedywilson.com	Confirmed Europe-based (Ireland). Not a US development contact. Do not pursue for SoCal work.

Approach Michael Eadie first. He holds direct authority over all US construction and engineering appointments. He's an operator — speak his language (schedule, constructability, concrete framing efficiency, Swinerton's experience as GC). The Lindley is evidence of fit. McCullough is the warm door because of the Toll Brothers history, but Eadie makes the SE call.

5. Competitive Reality

Incumbent SE for Kennedy Wilson: No SE firm has an established preferred-vendor relationship with KW's own development arm — KW grew by acquisition and asset management, not ground-up development. KOR is the only structural engineer publicly identified anywhere in KW's now-managed US portfolio (via The Lindley, which KOR delivered for Toll Brothers/PGIM). That is a credible foot in the door as KW stands up ground-up development under McCullough — an opening to seize, not an incumbency to claim.

For the new Toll Brothers pipeline sites: Structural appointments have not been publicly disclosed. Toll Brothers Apartment Living has historically used different SE firms by market. No single national SE is confirmed as a preferred vendor. The transition to Kennedy Wilson resets procurement.

Competing SE firms in KOR's markets:

- Seattle high-rise multifamily: Cary Kopczynski & Company (CKC) is the dominant firm — 20+ towers of 20 stories+. KOR's Seattle footprint is BC-based; for KW's Seattle acquisitions (existing assets), no new SE work is generated.
- SoCal: No dominant incumbent identified for the LA/SD Toll Brothers pipeline. The Lindley (SD) = KOR's proof of delivery.

Post-privatization transition window (now — Q3 2026). The Fairfax deal closed two weeks ago. Kennedy Wilson is reorganizing its cost structure, absorbing 85 Toll Brothers employees, and setting up a private-company operating model. Vendor relationships are under review. Incumbent consultants with a track record (KOR) have an advantage — but only if they are visible during the reset.

6. KOR Angle & How to Win

The story Jim should tell:

KOR engineered The Lindley — Kennedy Wilson's most prominent and architecturally recognized development asset (2025 BIA Icon Award — Best Architectural Design, Multifamily for Rent). KOR delivered a 37-story concrete high-rise in a demanding urban infill site with Swinerton as GC. That relationship is already inside the building.

Concrete talking points for Jim:

1. "We did The Lindley." Open with it. John McCullough ran that project at Toll Brothers. Michael Eadie is now overseeing it under KW. This is a live credential with people in the room.
2. "We cover your West Coast geography." KOR has offices in Vancouver BC (PNW), LA, and San Diego. The 29-site Toll Brothers pipeline includes LA (Warner Center, Culver City, Long Beach) and potentially PNW. One SE firm that knows both markets is an efficiency argument.
3. "We've worked with Swinerton." Swinerton built The Lindley. If they're on any LA-pipeline project (common for large GCs), KOR's field relationship is already established.
4. "Let's talk about the LA pipeline." Ask McCullough directly which of the 29 sites are in Southern California and whether SE has been appointed. The transition is the opening — don't wait for an RFP that may never be public.

Four concrete asks for the SD trip:

1. Request an in-person meeting with Michael Eadie (BH or via call) to introduce KOR as KW's SE on The Lindley and discuss the forward pipeline.
 2. Ask John McCullough (via warm email or intro call) which of the 29 Toll pipeline sites are in SoCal — position KOR as a natural continuation.
 3. Identify whether the Warner Center project (6464 Canoga Ave, 276 units, AC Martin as architect) has an SE appointed. If not, submit a qualifications letter immediately.
 4. Flag KOR's PNW structural engineering capacity (BC + potential WA expansion) against Kennedy Wilson's Bellevue office coverage area.
