CAD vs Revit — what the books say

How much CAD we still do, and whether it makes money. Measured from Deltek, weighted by hours and dollars, not by counting folders.

As of 14 October 2026
Billings posted through October 2026
2,328 jobs with production hours

DRAFTING HOURS ON CAD JOBS

23% of CAD + Revit, 2026 to date

Firm-wide, from timesheets. It was 54% in 2019. Residential alone is 24% this year.

RESIDENTIAL BILLINGS ON CAD JOBS

39% of CAD + Revit billings

Across 540 residential jobs with hours. By job count CAD is 63%: more jobs, smaller ones.

MARGIN ON RESIDENTIAL JOBS BILLED TO COMPLETION

17% CAD · 18% Revit

Billed minus labour at current cost rates, 162 CAD and 89 Revit jobs billed to completion. Typical job: 4% CAD, 21% Revit.

HOW MUCH CAD WE DO — DRAFTING HOURS BY YEAR

Every drafting hour on a timesheet, grouped by the drafting type Deltek records on the job. "Other" is General plus jobs with no tag.

PROFITABILITY – RESIDENTIAL JOBS BILLED TO COMPLETION, CAD VS REVIT

Completed = billed at least 90% of the fee. Margin = billed minus labour cost, where cost is every hour on the job at that person's current cost rate, partners imputed at $250. Era = year of the first timesheet.

Where every number comes from

- Deltek Vantagepoint over the same ODBC route the Financials module uses. Top-level regular projects only.
- Hours: tkDetail. Engineering = labour codes 10 and 30, Drafting = 20. Rejected lines excluded.
- Billed: PRSummaryMain, posted through October 2026. Fee: PR.Fee. US jobs converted at 1.36.
- Cost: hours × the person's current cost rate (EMCompany), partners at $250/hr. The Historical screen in the app prices hours of staff who have left at zero; this report prices them. Both figures are in the workbook.
- Drafting type: the Deltek custom field CustDraftingType (RV, CAD, General). Sector: PR.ProjectType.
- Reproduced the app's cost and margin to the dollar on six projects before anything was written.

What this does not say

- Only 1,281 of 2,328 jobs with hours carry a drafting-type tag. The untagged line is real work that cannot be split.
- Cost rates are today's, applied to every year. Old jobs look costlier than they were; it hits CAD and Revit alike within an era, which is why the eras are kept apart.
- A "CAD job" is the tag on the job, not every hour. A job that moved to Revit mid-way counts where Deltek put it.
- In-flight jobs are excluded from margin: cost lands before billing does.
- Counting folders with a .dwg or .rvt in them counts jobs, not work. Of 31 jobs on one such sheet, Deltek tagged 18 and the sheet agreed with 15 of them; on 13 Deltek had no tag, and the folder check found CAD files on 5.
